

I am saddened and distressed to learn that you at the FCC are contemplating overturning NJ's Do Not Call law. My personal opinion, while not important to you, is that NJ's policy should be a constitutional amendment because we are taking first steps to win back our home life. However, my opinion aside, this issue should be a poster child for state level decisions. Why would you at the FCC feel it is necessary to get involved at the state level? Perhaps there is some civil liberty that I am having infringed by not receiving countless unwanted calls as all hours of the day and night. This is not something that the state of NJ is mandating, rather leaving up to the individuals. I would truly like to know what the argument against that is. Thank you in advance for your response.
